General facts about Moriarty, New Mexico

Introduction

The city of Moriarty, centrally located in Torrance County, is an ideal location. At the junction of Interstate 40 and N.M. Highway 41, Moriarty not only benefits from its proximity to the Albuquerque metropolitan area, but also has ready access to the interstate highway network. The town was named after Michael Moriarty, a man from Iowa who settled here in 1887. The railroad came in 1903 and the community has been a stop for east- and westbound travelers ever since. Moriarty is the hub in Torrance County for farmers and ranchers working the Estancia Valley southeast to Albuquerque and the Galisteo area to the northeast.

Geographic Setting

Moriarty lies within the oval-shaped Estancia Basin, with the rugged forested slopes of the Manzano and Sandia Mountains to the west and the rolling Pedernal Hills to the east. Moriarty is 17 miles north of Estancia, the Torrance County seat. Just 52 miles south of Santa Fe and 35 miles east of Albuquerque, Moriarty businesses and residents are within convenient driving distances of two major cities. Communities between Albuquerque and Moriarty include Edgewood, Cedar Crest and Tijeras. Smaller municipalities in the county include Estancia, Mountainair, Stanley, Willard and Encino.

Topography

Torrance County, southern Santa Fe County and eastern Bernalillo County are commonly known as the East Mountains and Estancia Valley. Dominant topographic features include the Manzano Mountains in the southwestern portion of the county, and the Sandia and Sangre de Cristo Mountains, both northwest in the county. The mountain elevations range from 10,000 to 12,600 feet above sea level. The Estancia Valley consists of flat plains and low rolling hills, scattered with yucca, cedar and pinon trees. Significant agricultural activity in this region includes alfalfa, wheat, corn, garlic and pinto bean farming.

Climate Data

Moriarty's four-season climate can be classified as "semiarid continental." Although the word "semiarid" denotes a dry climate, skiers love winter in New Mexico where mountain peaks reach over 13,000 feet and snow caps last from fall through spring. Winter weather is pleasantly sunny and mild with warm daytime temperatures in the mid-40s. Precipitation averages slightly more than 11 inches per year and much of the winter precipitation, averaging about one-half inch per month, falls as snow. Summer temperatures in this region vary with the terrain. In the plains areas, daytime temperatures average in the mid-80s with about 33 days per year reaching temperatures of 90 or higher. In the mountain areas of Torrance County, summer days are relatively cool with averages around 70. Summer nights are cool and pleasant. Frequent summer showers help to relieve the heat of the warmer days. The high elevation, the preponderance of clear dry air and the valley location all combine to produce rapid cooling after sundown.

The sun shines over Moriarty about 75 percent of the possible hours each year. The percentage is somewhat lower in winter and spring, and highest in the fall. Relative humidity averages about 50 percent -- 20 percent during the warmer part of the day in late winter and spring.

Population

While the city of Moriarty's population is about 1,765, the numbers jump to an estimated 45,000 residents within a 25-mile radius. The population of Torrance County is 16,911. Torrance County grew by 64.4% between the 1990 and 2000 census. The residential growth between Albuquerque and Moriarty has also been tremendous in the past ten years.

Form of Government

As the largest community in Torrance County, Moriarty is an incorporated municipality with a mayor-council form of government and six elective positions: the mayor, four city councilors and a municipal judge. Elected officers serve four-year, staggered terms. The remaining city government positions are appointed.

Local Economy

A large labor force is available throughout much of the East Mountains and Torrance County. Torrance County employment went from 6,393 in March 2000 to 6,877 in March 2001. The unemployment rate for Torrance County in March 2001 was 5.2 compared to a statewide rate of 5.4 percent.

Many of the area residents commute daily to jobs in Albuquerque with a ride of about 30 to 45 minutes.

A detailed breakdown of employed persons by industry and occupation reveals a community of workers in business, service and government sectors. Because of its location, Moriarty's local economy is based on highway-related services and retail establishments that serve the large surrounding rural area. The most important segment of the local economy is trucking-related businesses and services. Another important segment is government employment, which accounts for almost 23 percent of all employed persons; most are employed with the Moriarty Public School District. Table 1-2 lists some of the major employers.

Per Capita Income

According to 2000 census, the average per capita income for Torrance County was $16,629. This compares to a state average of $21,853 and an Albuquerque average of $25,619.

Education

Moriarty Public School District Number 8 is comprised of five elementary, two middle and one high school. Plans are in progress for a new high school. The school district is made up of the northern portion of Torrance County, the southern portion of Santa Fe County and a small portion of eastern Bernalillo County. More than 90 percent of the students are transported to their respective schools by the district's 44 school buses. The recent enrollment growth in the school district reflects the increase in the regional population.

The University of New Mexico, the state's largest institution of higher education, is located in Albuquerque. Special programs for General Education Development (GED) and English as a second language are available in Moriarty through UNM Valencia, who also conducts continuing education classes in Moriarty. T-VI is a trade school in Albuquerque that offers a variety of certifications and degrees in trade and technical areas.

Housing

Available, affordable housing continues to be one of the area's strongest draws. Within the city, four housing subdivisions for moderate income people have been designed and there are plans for others. Few rental houses are available, but some can be found from $550 to $700/month plus utilities. In the Moriarty area, small houses under 1500 sq. ft. sell from $60,000 to $70,000. Larger ones run from $100,000 and up. It is hard to generalize because of the amenities in each home.

Police/Fire Protection

The City of Moriarty provides police protection for the municipality, with a staff of nine full-time officers and a fleet of nine police vehicles. The Torrance County Sheriff's Office provides police protection within the county and the New Mexico State Police maintains a district office in Moriarty.

The Moriarty Fire Department has two full time employees, the chief and captain, who direct a volunteer staff of 24 persons. The fire rating for the area is 7. Rescue service is provided by the Moriarty Fire Department; they have a unit with life-support equipment. The staff includes ten certified emergency medical technician volunteers in addition to the two full time workers.

Medical/Hospital Services

The McLeod Medical Center has a D.O. physician, a chiropractor and two certified nurse practitioners. Clinic facilities include X-ray, pulmonary testing and lab equipment for blood cell counts, glucose, cholesterol and potassium tests. Results of tests performed by other labs are sent to the clinic's computer during the night and are available to the patients the next morning. A 24-hour answering service enables patients to contact their physicians when the clinic is closed. The Moriarty Family Dental Office is located on Rt. 66 at the west end.

Emergency services are available throughout the region, including Emergency 911 services. Ambulance service is provided by Mednet, with a staff of eight full-time and a dozen part-time certified emergency medical technicians. The company operates ambulances with advanced life-support equipment. One ambulance is on duty seven days a week for 24 hours a day. It is supplemented by another ambulance for an additional 50 hours a week. The Albuquerque area has four hospitals that offer extensive medical services: University of New Mexico Hospital, Presbyterian Healthcare Services, Lovelace Health Systems and St. Joseph Healthcare System.

Lifeguard One Air Emergency Services, based at the University of New Mexico Hospital, transfers patients by helicopter in urgent or life-threatening situations to an appropriate hospital. A fixed-wing air ambulance service, Presbyterian Air Ambulance, is sponsored by Presbyterian Healthcare.

Financial Institutions

Moriarty has three banks in the community, Rancher's Bank and Wells Fargo and First State Bank.

Recreation

Not only is Moriarty a great place to live, it also offers a variety of activities for residents and visitors. From the ruins of pueblo villages to the historic Route 66, the region is rich with history. For those who love the outdoors, Torrance County has many sights to enjoy. The county was once home to ancient Anasazi and Mogollon cultures. Visitors can trace the prehistoric trade routes through the ruins of pueblo villages and visit the awe-inspiring mission churches of Abo, Gran Quivira and Quarai. The ancient Indians mined salt in nearby lakes, giving the present-day name to the area of the "Salt Missions Trail."

The Cibola National Forest, off of N.M. Highway 337, is the perfect outdoor recreation area for horseback riding, hiking and other outdoor sports. The area has a 200-unit reservation campground, a variety of picnic areas and a visitor's center. The Manzano Lake and State Park offer trout fishing, camping and other outdoor activities.
